school pocket money

for children from low-income families

about SPMF

The Straits Times School Pocket Money Fund¹ (SPMF) is a community project initiated by The Straits Times in October 2000, with the aim of helping children from low-income families pay for basic school-related expenses. The fund is administered by the National Council of Social Service.

SPMF offers short-term financial aid provided with casework and counselling to support families in working through their challenges. Families receiving SPMF will have regular review sessions with their social workers and should attend workshops, talks and programmes organised by the disbursing agency.

how do I qualify?

1. The student is a Singapore Citizen or Permanent Resident.
2. The child must be a full-time student at a:
 - mainstream school (primary / secondary);
 - special school, Mountbatten Vocational School, Northlight School, Assumption Pathway School; or
 - religious school (such as a madrasah).
3. The family is living in a HDB 4-room flat or smaller.
4. Per capita nett² household income is $450 or less per month. This means that the total nett family income divided by the number of family members should not exceed $450 per member each month. For example, if the father is the sole breadwinner in a family of five and has nett income of $1,000 a month, the per capita nett family income is $200.
5. The student has not received SPMF for more than 24 months.

how can I apply?

1. To apply to The Straits Times School Pocket Money Fund, please call the ComCare helpline at 1800 222 0000. This number will be linked to the FSC nearest to your home. A social worker will advise you about applying for the fund.
2. If your child is studying in any of the special schools listed in this brochure or in Assumption Pathway School, you can approach the school directly to apply for the fund.

For more information, email to stfund@sph.com.sg

During the application process, a social worker may visit your home or conduct a face-to-face interview to understand your needs. On top of the SPMF criteria, the outcome of your application will also be guided by the social worker's assessment.

1. More information is available at www.straitstimes.com/spmf
2. Nett income is defined as income remaining after CPF deduction
